Paul Thornley: Asked if it is okay for BSHM to make a profit according to the Charity Commission? Patrick answered by observing that BSHM is a Charitable Company, and that that is distinct from a CIO. The norm for any company (the default) is to make a profit. Equally, it is okay for a Charitable Company to make a loss in a year as long as it meets charitable objectives.

Meg Briers: Cautioned membership that there might be some outages - as new website installed, and may be down for 7-10 days.

Robin Wilson: Mentioned his project for the history of math (short films) through Oxford University, and as part of his activities as a HiMEd lecturer.
